The rollover state displays the navigation font in an orange color, to show the user that they may click items in the navigation bar as well as further highlight where they are hovering their mouse along the navigation bar. This will help draw attention to the navigation bar as the user mouses over it, and entice them to explore further.

The active state displays the name of the current section in dark blue, to help highlight that the user is currently in a certain section. When a user selects a section, a subnavigation bar will also appear on the new page, and highlight the page within the section that the user is currently on.

This will keep the site clean, yet functional for both desktop and mobile, as well as help users keep track of where they are on the site. This design and active state will be used on both desktop and tablet versions of the website.
